Leadership in a Complex World

Oct. 22–23, 2014 | 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.
Mays Business School at CITYCENTRE, Houston, TX
Roemer Visser, MBA Programs

Cost: $1,795; group discounts available for multiple attendees from the same organization
Texas A&M Former Student and CED alumni discounts | Capacity: 25 participants | CEU credits available

As globalization continues and the world’s economies grow increasingly interconnected, the business environment has become more and more uncertain. As a result, the way we talk and think about leadership is in need of renewal. In this interactive, two-day course, you and other successful leaders (for-profit and not-for-profit) will engage in a meaningful exploration to examine what it takes to lead successfully in a complex world.

THE COURSE WILL ENABLE YOU TO:

• Describe and critically review mainstream leadership theories
• Articulate which assumptions and principles have informed your leadership thus far
• Compare and contrast traditional leadership methods with emerging thinking on leadership
• Apply a variety of new concepts and methods

You’ll leave the course with an expanded leadership repertoire, inspired to put it into action immediately.

TARGET AUDIENCE

• Those new to the role of supervisor or leader
• Current leaders who are looking to enhance their leadership effectiveness
• Anyone seeking a better understanding of leadership

KEY FEATURES OF THE COURSE

• Two full days, plus approximately one half day of preparation
• Personalized: the course will take your own learning needs into account
• Interactive: an optimal mix of talking and listening, dialogue and action
• Both conceptually strong and practical in its approach

To register, contact Jennifer Cutler at 979-845-1216 or jcutler@mays.tamu.edu.

Center for Executive Development
979-845-1216 | ced.tamu.edu